Debt Snowball Worksheet

Built by Daniel Motter, who is paying off about $49k of his own debt, one payment at a time.

> "Owe no one anything, except to love each other, for the one who loves another has fulfilled the law." Romans 13:8 (ESV)

1 List every debt

Write the real balance, interest rate, and minimum payment for each one. Use another sheet if you have more than eight.

#	DEBT NAME	BALANCE	INTEREST RATE	MINIMUM PAYMENT
5
6

2 Order smallest balance first

In the # column, write 1 next to the smallest balance, then 2, and so on. Ignore interest rates for this order — the snowball starts with the smallest balance so you can get an early win, then roll that payment forward.

3 Find your snowball

My monthly extra: _____

Pay every minimum each month. Put your extra on debt #1. When #1 is gone, its minimum joins the extra on debt #2. Each freed minimum rolls into the next debt — that growing payment is your snowball.

4 Estimate your payoff

For each debt in order: snowball payment = that debt's minimum + your extra + the minimums of debts you have already paid off. Months ≈ balance ÷ snowball payment (round up). Add the months together. Interest makes the real date a little later — use the free online calculator for an exact date.

EXAMPLE

Extra $100. 1. Store card ($400): snowball $125 → 4 mo. 2. Credit card ($1,200): snowball $160 → 8 mo. 3. Car loan ($3,000): snowball $250 → 12 mo. About 24 months in this simple count (interest not included).

My simple estimate:

_____ months

5 Circle your target debt-free date

Starting this month as 1, circle the month that matches your estimate — or the date you're asking God to help you reach. Write the calendar date below.

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12
13	14	15	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24
25	26	27	28	29	30	31	32	33	34	35	36

My target date: _____

Your First 30 Days

A gentle checklist — not a test. Do what you can, in the order that fits your life. One honest step is enough for today.

Use the next month to put your snowball in motion. Check things off as you go. If a week gets away from you, pick back up without shame.

- [ ] List every debt with real balances, interest rates, and minimum payments.
- [ ] Number them smallest balance first — that order is your snowball.
- [ ] Set a starter emergency-fund goal, even a small one.
- [ ] Build a zero-based budget that includes a giving line.
- [ ] Find one expense you can trim this month.
- [ ] Choose a monthly extra payment you can actually keep.
- [ ] Make your first extra payment toward the smallest debt.
- [ ] Log that payment on this sheet or in the app.
- [ ] Tell an accountability partner, if you have one.
- [ ] Schedule a weekly 10-minute money check-in.
- [ ] Download the free spreadsheets if you want a digital copy.
- [ ] Celebrate the first step. Showing up counts.
